About the competition

Have you taken, or fancy taking, some great pictures of your fish farm, your workmates, or the natural world around you? Enter the Intervet/Schering Plough Aqua Team Photography Competition, for your chance to win a photography weekend workshop with Philip Dunn, a professional photographer based in Kirkcudbright. There will also be a runner-up prize of a one day course with Philip.

There are 3 categories to enter:

- The fish farm
- Colleagues and workmates
(please get their permission to use their photo)
- The natural world around you

The entries will be judged in December 2010 by a panel of judges including: David Schofield (Business Unit Director, Intervet/Schering-Plough Animal Health), William Dowds (Advertising Manager, Fish Farmer) and Philip Dunn.

All entrants will receive a small prize for taking the trouble to enter.

About the prizes

First prize – Photography weekend workshop with Philip Dunn

Designed to help you achieve more from your camera and produce better photographs, every time. Along with extensive practical advice, the tuition will enable you to convert your thoughts into successful photographs...and to think visually.

- Learn how to get more from your digital camera
- How to use natural light more effectively
- Improve your photographic technique
- Dramatically improve your picture composition

The weekend workshop is held at the Selkirk Arms Hotel in Galloway, SW Scotland, where you can relax in comfort after a busy day taking photographs and learning new camera techniques. The prize includes two nights accommodation, welcome drink, dinner on Friday and Saturday, breakfast and lunch on Saturday and Sunday.

Runner-up prize – A one day course with Philip Dunn

A practical and inspirational course to offer the best possible way to improve your camera craft, create more exciting images, and learn how to see and capture better pictures.

- Learn the art of good composition
- Learn how to capture the action on camera
- How to photograph people
- How to photograph landscapes

The one day course is held at Philip Dunn's studio at Kirkcudbright. The course includes morning coffee, lunch and transport from the studio to the locations.

Please see the back cover for the competition rules.

By entering this competition you are giving Intervet/Schering-Plough Animal Health permission to use the images.

About Philip Dunn

Former Sunday Times travel photographer Philip Dunn is a professional photographer with over 40 years experience in photography and writing. Philip now runs photography courses, workshops and holidays in the UK and Menorca, Spain. More details can be found at www.photoactive.co.uk

'I've been a professional photographer and writer for almost 40 years. My first picture was published in the Manchester Evening News when I was just 14 years old. At 15, working with glass plate press cameras, I was an apprentice on a local newspaper. I was the youngest staffman ever to join the Daily Express, where I worked for 15 years before being invited to work for The Independent newspaper in London. I then joined the Sunday Times as their Travel Photographer – 'the best job in the world'.

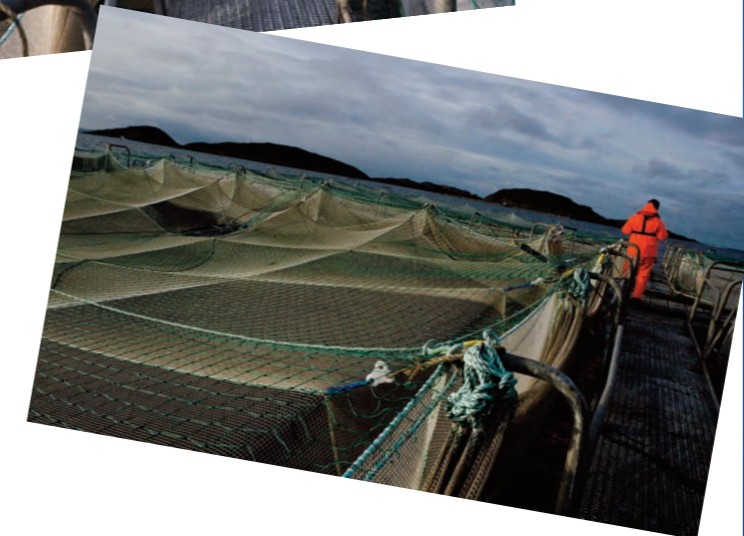

About entering the competition

Photographs can be sent by email to photos@licemonitor.co.uk together with your name, address, mobile and email contact details.

Please write licemonitor photos in the email subject line and clearly label your photographs with the category it is being entered for.

Each category entry needs to be a minimum of a 3MB digital file in JPG format. You can enter a maximum of one photograph per category.

Entries can be viewed at: <http://www.flickr.com/photos/licemonitor/> from 1st June 2010.
